SYNOPSIS

The year is 2052 and the Earth faces a never before seen devastation. A rogue meteor is hurtling towards our planet on a direct collision course. A battery of missiles is launched to destroy the meteor. A direct hit! The meteor is diverted and only small shards enter the atmosphere and most of them are destroyed in the atmosphere. The Earth is saved... or so we think.

In the desert, a last remaining shard of the meteor makes it through and smashes into the ground. Unbeknownst to anyone, the impact brings with it the end of the world as we know it. A green gas begins to emit from the meteor and within days engulfs the Earth and lays waste to all male humans.

The men of the Earth die with no warning as the green gas reaches them. Our skies are permanently transformed into a greenish color. Chaos and panic ensue as men fall dead all over the world. Planes fall from the sky, men fall to their death from construction sites. Even boys are not spared.

As the women try to understand what has happened, terror and loss seem to be the only things that remain for them. We follow 6 main female characters around the world as they struggle to survive. Emergency policies are quickly adopted to help bring peace back to the Earth.

With the help of learning holograms and advanced technologies of the day, women begin a new way to live. Medical personnel discover the cause of the deaths, and as months go by we realize that the Earth can no longer sustain any males. Women must find solutions to the immense number of problems facing them to ensure the Earth's survival.

Laws are put in place to regulate the disbursement of sperm in all sperm banks and research into cloning is increased. Women learn new skills to regain control of machines that were mainly run by men and must coordinate an unfathomable global recovery effort. The struggle for peace and survival in this new world seems impossible. While the Earth's population is cut in half and there are plenty of resources, the obstacles facing the female population seem insurmountable. But life finds a way and peace returns. A new era on Earth begins.
